

PARENT'S DEPARTMENT.

From the Mother's Magazine.

Little Ann's Request.

Will you please to give me some sewing, this morning? said little Ann, one day to her mother.

No, my dear—you are always teasing me for something.

But I do not like to be idle, mother, said Ann.

I tell you, child, I cannot be troubled by you, now; besides, you so soon get tired of your work, when I do prepare any for you.

I know, mother, I have had both knitting and sewing, and have got tired of them; but I should not get tired of them now.

I say I cannot give you any this morning. I find it more trouble to fit work for you than it is all worth. I had rather do the same work myself, twice over; so don't interrupt me.

But, mother, I fear I shall never learn to sew.

That, indeed, you will, my dear, if I can have my own way. I shall never do you any sewing for you, with all my other cares. On the contrary, I intend you shall do the sewing for all the family, when you get old enough. In what other way do you expect to pay me for all my care of you?

Why then, mother, shall I not begin to learn now?

I have told you before that you are very troublesome; but if you will know all my reasons, I must tell you, once for all, that it requires so much patience to teach children to sew, that I shall never undertake the job myself. I had rather hire some one to teach you. When you are a little older, I intend sending you to a sewing school, and as I shall have to pay the teacher, she can afford to exercise patience with you.

We believe that there are few mothers who have not, at times, been thus importuned. Let us endeavor to analyze the above conversation, and ascertain the probable effects, upon the happiness, and disposition, not only of both mother and child, but also of a whole household, of treating the reasonable requests of little children with such apparent, not to say, contemptuous indifference. What paramount object could have so engrossed this mother, that she could not have attended to the reasonable, yet delightful request of her little one. Was she absolutely, or even necessarily engaged? or was it not rather an excuse for her indolence. The mother probably succeeded in deceiving herself; the child was not so easily deceived. Children are, not unfrequently, profound reasoners.

This conversation had scarcely ended, before a friend came in, and proposed to the mother to accompany her in a walk. My dear Mrs. R. said the mother, I had fancied myself exceedingly occupied in the care of my little George, who is not quite well this morning. But, really, your kindness deserves attention.

Come, my dear Ann, I think for once you can so manage as to make your little bro comfortable, till mother's return; I cannot find it in my heart to refuse Mrs. R.'s politeness. One cannot always be compelled to stay at home, taking care of children. I will venture to leave the child for an hour or so. Come, sit down Mrs. R., and I will soon be in readiness to accompany you.

Children soon learn to imitate the example of their mother. It was now Ann's turn to demur. This was done in looks and gestures rather than in words or positive resistance. Come, dear, said the mother, be a good little girl, and take good care of little brother, and mother will bring you home some cake, or some candy, or sugar plums.

The two friends had scarcely commenced their walk, before little George catches the infection of discontent from his disappointed sister, and sets up such a scream as drives poor Ann to desperation. The father, happening to return at this moment, finds all in an uproar. Where is your mother, my dear Ann? She has gone out for a walk, father, with Mrs. R.

I thought your mother said at the breakfast table, that George was ill. Go and call Ellen, to come and comfort the poor thing.

The father has no sooner left the house, than a little girl calls to see if Ann will go with her, and do an errand for her mother. Ann now recollects that such politeness is not to be refused, and is willing, under any pretext, to save herself the trouble of taking care of a screaming child. Indeed, it requires more patience than she can now command; Ellen can do it better, as she is paid for it. Poor Ellen's work is all thrown into disorder. My dinner, she exclaims, cannot be in readiness at the appointed hour; my poor master's business will be interrupted, and my mistress will be very angry.

The mistress of the house, on her return, charges all the blame upon Ann and Ellen, indiscriminately. The blame being mutually divided, is neither felt nor acknowledged on the part of either.

Now had Ann's mother replied to her request—Yes, my dear, it is right that you should be industrious: I am gratified when you try to be useful. Come, you divert little George, and I will soon have some work ready for you. This cheerful compliance, on the part of the mother, charms the heart of little Ann. She is pleased, in her turn, with an opportunity of testifying her grateful obedience to such a kind hearted mother. Come, brother, and sister Ann will tell you a pretty story. The work is soon ready; Ann is so happy in the affections of her mother, and pleased with her smiling brother, for even little George has participated in the happiness of both mother and sister, that but for the real desire of being useful and industrious, she would have found difficulty in abstracting her mind from a scene so sweet—so delightful, and in bringing it down to the sober business of learning to sew by taking very little stitches.

What contributes more to a father's happiness, than the pleasure of returning to his own cheerful dwelling, where he is sure to meet her, who is rearing up his dear ones in the paths of virtuous industry: going before them in all the endearments of domestic love; training them up in habits of frugality and economy; and showing them the precious fruits of patient and self-denying efforts, by her own worthy example.

Christian Charity.

The propensity in human nature which has the chief influence in separating man from man, and disturbing all the harmonies of life, is selfishness. By one device or another men are ever seeking to promote their own interest, their own gratification, their own ease, reputation or distinction. Hence arise the jealousies, suspicions and enmities with which they view those who are likely to interfere with them in their favorite pursuits, and those who, in similar pursuits, have been more fortunate than themselves. Christian charity strikes at the root of this propensity, so wide in its extent, so destructive in its influence; "charity seeketh not her own." It would lead us into a field far too extensive for our present purpose, were we to endeavor to trace the manner in which selfishness enters into all our pursuits, and the extent to which it interferes with that spirit of kindness to our fellow citizens to which so much importance is attached in the great practical rules of the gospel of Christ. Every one has only to watch minutely his own conduct to discover, in how many instances a regard to his own interest, comfort, or distinction interferes with the kindly feelings and the offices of kindness which he owes to others,—how often he is prevented by mere indolence, or a selfish regard to his own ease, from doing good in various ways which would cost nothing but a little exertion;—how often a regard to his own feelings interferes with what is due to the feelings of other men;—and how different the conduct of all of us would very often be, did we deliberately place ourselves in the situation of others, and calmly view their circumstances and their feelings, as if they were in our situation and we in theirs. There is not, in the high requirements of the gospel, a principle of more essential importance than this. When our Lord says, "if any man will be my disciple, let him deny himself," he calls us not to mortifications or austerities calculated only to inflict suffering on ourselves;—but he calls us, and he calls us "as one having authority," to renounce all those selfish indulgences, and selfish humors, and that pursuit of selfish interest, which interfere with the zealous and extensive exertions for the comfort and the good of others, to which he attaches so important a place as a test of our affection to him and our devotedness to his service. In such a course he has left us a bright example, and he calls us to follow his steps. He calls us to enter with kindly interest into the wants and feelings of our brethren, and in many instances, to sacrifice our own interest, ease, indulgence, and inclinations to theirs. By the high sanction of his own example, we are exhorted to have the same mind in us which was also in him; and this exhortation is enforced by the solemn denunciation, that "if any man hath not the spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

CHERAW ACADEMY.

THE Trustees take great pleasure in announcing to the public that Mr. and Mrs. Davis have arrived and taken charge of their respective departments in this Institution. They bring with them testimonials of the highest character, from Governor Everett, and other distinguished individuals of Massachusetts.

Mr. Davis is a gentleman of extensive literary attainments, has gained a high reputation as a teacher, and intends devoting his life to the business. He will qualify young men for admission into the South Carolina, or any other College in the United States, or for entering upon the active duties of life without a College course.

Mrs. Davis, who has charge of the Female Department (under the general superintendence of Mr. Davis) has for several years had the management of a female school, in which she acquired a high character both as a teacher and a disciplinarian.

Miss Harding who gave so great and universal satisfaction last year, will continue one of the assistants. From the prosperous condition of the school, other teachers will shortly be employed.

Miss Baker who is well approved as a Teacher will continue to give lessons in Music. The Trustees have been so fortunate as to procure Mrs. Watson, late of Society Hill, to take charge of the boarding house for girls, than whom, no one is better qualified for the situation. For board, lodging, washing, fuel, and candles, per quarter, $30.00

For reading, writing, and spelling, 5.00

The above, with English Grammar, arithmetic, and Geography, 6.00

The above, with the higher branches of English, including Geography with the use of the Globes, History, ancient and modern, Grammar, Rhetoric, Composition, Natural, Moral, and Intellectual Philosophy, Chemistry, Botany, Mathematics, Drawing and Painting—the Latin and Greek languages, French, Spanish, and Italian, 10.00

Music, 12.50

The whole charges payable quarterly in advance. The Trustees confidently recommend this institution to the public, as being equal to any in the State. THO. E. FOWE, Sec. and Treasurer. Jan. 1835.

Devon Stock.

THE editor of the Farmer and Gardener can at all times supply orders for Devon Cattle this breed is so distinguished for their easy keep and docility, the richness of the milk of the cows, and for the activity and sprightliness of the oxen, that they would be admirably suited to the purposes of southern agriculturists.

The happy adaptation of the Devonshire Oxen, for the purposes of the farm, will be understood, when it is stated that 4 oxen have been known to plough 3 acres of ground in a day, and a team of them to trot at the rate of six miles an hour in an empty wagon.

Any person wishing to procure them can be supplied by addressing a letter post paid to the editor of the Farmer and Gardener. Baltimore, Nov 10

CIRCULAR.

The Board of Trade of the City of New York, respectfully address the following Circular to the Merchants of the United States, who trade with this city:

YOU are aware that on the night of the 16th of December last, an unprecedented Conflagration destroyed, in an important portion of our city, between Wall and Broad streets, embracing the Store of many wealthy and enterprising Merchants.

Lost an apprehension should prevail that this loss may render our merchants unable to furnish the usual amount and variety of merchandise heretofore exhibited in this market, the Board of Trade have much satisfaction in giving the assurance that the Merchants whose stores were destroyed, have removed to others, and are prepared from fresh importations to continue their business with their usual assortments.

The Board of Trade therefore deem it proper to give this public assurance that none need postpone their usual time of visiting the city, confident that they will find the market as well supplied as usual, and their correspondents equally able to supply their demands.

Culture of Silk.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the Culture of Silk, adapted to the climate and soil of the United States, by F. G. COMSTOCK, Secretary to the Hartford County Silk Society, and Editor of the Silk Culturist. Illustrated by engravings.

The interest in all parts of the United States in the culture and manufacture of Silk, manifested by the constant calls for information on the subject, has induced the publisher to have prepared a plain Practical Treatise on the cultivation of the Mulberry and rearing Silk Worms, adapted to the soil and climate of this country and to the wants of plain practical men.

The Practical Culturist in this country needs a directory adapted to the soil on which he plants his trees, and the climate in which he rears his worms, without reference to soils and climates less congenial to their growth. It has been therefore the object of the author to make a treatise strictly practical, omitting nothing of importance, and adding nothing of a useless or extraneous character.

As making the raw material into sewing Silk and Twist is very profitable to the Silk grower, all necessary information for that purpose will be given.

This work is in the press and will soon be published in a duodecimo of about 100 pages, in handsome binding—price 50 cents. A part of the edition will be put up in elastic covers to be forwarded by mail.

Editors of Newspapers who will give the above three insertions, with this notice, and forward their paper with the advertisement marked, shall be entitled to a copy of the work, to be forwarded to their order.

WM. G. COMSTOCK. Hartford, Dec. 1835.

The Monthly Genn. Farmer, AND HORTICULTURIST.

Published on the first of each month, in Rochester, N. Y., by Luther Tucker.

THE Publisher of the Genesee Farmer, at the solicitation of many friends of Agricultural improvement in Western New York, has issued the first number (for January, 1836) of a monthly periodical, under the above title, which, while it will embody much of the practical matter of that well established paper, will be furnished to subscribers at the exceedingly low price of Fifty Cents a year. It is believed that such a work is much wanted to supply those who are unable or unwilling to take a higher priced Agricultural paper, and that its general circulation among our Farmers, cannot fail to promote their private interests as well as the public prosperity.

The course and standing of the Genesee Farmer is so extensively known, that it is not necessary to say more than that the Monthly Farmer and Horticulturist will be made up of the most practical and useful articles which appear weekly in that work. It will be handsomely printed, 16 pages octavo to each number, making an annual volume, with Title-page and Index of 300 pages. The payment will in all cases be required in advance.

Seven copies for Three Dollars—Twelve for Five Dollars—or a commission of 20 per cent. allowed to Agents on all sums amounting to $5, or more—the money to be sent free of postage. Rochester, N. Y. Jan. 1836.

The attention of Mothers, of all Christian denominations, is respectfully requested to this Circular. To increase confidence in the Mother's Magazine, and to express their conviction of the great importance of the cause which it advocates, the undersigned have given the following testimonial to the public.

CIRCULAR. MATERNAL INFLUENCE is acknowledged, by Legislatures, Philosophers and Divines, to be one of the principal causes which give character to nations, as well as to individuals. When this truth is so clearly seen, both in history and experience, it becomes every Patriot, and every Christian, to manifest his approbation of such measures as will enlighten and purify this controlling influence.

In accordance with this sentiment, the undersigned take great pleasure in recommending to every Mother, in our beloved country, the monthly periodical entitled THE MOTHER'S MAGAZINE. This publication, edited by MRS. A. G. WHITTELEY, was commenced two years since, and has not only obtained an extensive circulation at home, but is reprinted by two different presses in England. It is furnished to subscribers, at the low price of One Dollar a year, and is published by Rev. S. Whittlesey, 146 Nassau-street New York.
